DARIAH CONSENT FORM WIZARD

- <https://consent.dariah.eu/>
  - Why and how was it created?
  - What GDPR requirements does it address?
  - How it works?
  - Is it updated?

- Digital Humanities researchers often collect personal data for their research:
    - they know they should obtain consent
    - ...but they don't know how to go about it (any templates for a consent form /privacy policy, please?)
    - DARIAH ELDAH wanted to help
      - limited scenarios: processing research/conference/newsletter on the basis of consent.
  - Funded by CLARIAH-AT, DARIAH-HR and DARIAH-EU in cooperation with SSHOC
  - Created by two DH researchers, one ethnologist/archivist, one lawyer, one developer (4 different native languages in the team)
  - Intention to create an open tool (open licenses)

- Principle of lawfulness, fairness and transparency (Art. 5(1)a of the GDPR)
    - lawfulness: consent (needs to be informed in order to be valid)
    - transparency —> right of information (Art. 12-14 GDPR)
  - Many other requirements of the GDPR addressed ‘indirectly’ (the user is brought to think about purpose limitation, storage limitation, data transfers...)
  - High ethical standard
    - CFW generates more than required by the GDPR for valid consent, it generated a full privacy policy (extended consent form)

- A ‘full option’ version of the ‘extended consent form’ was drafted by a trained lawyer with expertise in DH research
  - By answering a questionnaire, the user (unknowingly):
    - fills in the blanks
    - chooses between various options
    - removes unnecessary passages (‘sculpts’ in the initial text)
  - Output: a nice and shiny, GDPR-compliant, made-to-measure Consent Form (also in raw text)!

- CFW is an Open tool (text under CC BY, code under MIT licenses, accessible on Github), so everyone can make his or her own version
  - 5 months of beta testing (April-September 2020)
  - GDPR fundamentals are here to stay — not much need for updates...
  - Important updates: new languages added (DE, IT, HR, ES)
    - high quality human translation
    - new languages coming soon (French, Hindi, Norwegian, Slovenian)
